Home Learning Projects

Propaganda posters were common throughout world war two. They were designed to encourage men to sign up to war by making it look glamorous and asking them to defend their nation, and to encourage women into jobs left unfilled by men, such as farming and working in factories.

Design a poster to encourage men or women into necessary roles for the war effort.

This half term's projects focus on:

World War II

To hand in by: 24.10.20

During the war, thousands of children were sent out to the countryside or even abroad where the threat of bombs was much lower. They had to leave their family, friends and schools and went to more rural settings like farms and villages.

- Imagine you have been evacuated. Write a letter home to your family telling them about your new home.
- Think about our recent lockdown experience. Write a comparison between that and being evacuated. What was the same and what would be different?

During the war, the Germans developed an 'unbreakable' code to pass messages amongst their army.

Have a go at creating your own code and write a secret message to your teachers.

Or try writing some messages in morse code, a system of dots and dashes that is easy to transmit as an electrical signal.

Look at the books and websites section for more information.

Aeroplanes were vital during the war and were used by both sides to attack towns and cities.

They had to be carefully designed to fly quickly, manoeuvre easily and be camouflaged against the sky.

Design your own plane that meets these criteria. Draw a picture showing the shape and patterns. If you want, you could attempt to build a model as well.
