Mr Flavell's story ending

Gracefully, George and the dragon swooped through the midnight sky. A light breeze tickled George's hair and he was amazed by the beautiful mountains and vast oceans that he could see down below. After what seemed like forever, they broke through a fluffy cloud and George gasped in astonishment. He found himself in what could only be described as a magical kingdom. In the distance, he spotted an enchanting castle that was surrounded by lush, green hills and pleasant valleys. The sun shone down and the clear, blue skies were filled with clouds. At the top of a colossal tower, George spotted a lonely figure. Who was it?

Suddenly, a shrill scream filled the air. It was coming from the tower! It must be a Princess! As quick as a flash, they zoomed towards the castle. As they approached, George noticed that a poor maiden had been trapped by a ghastly knight. They had no choice but to use the dragon's fire
